New Zealand's November elections will be followed by the Victoria University of Wellington post-election conference, the 14th conference in a series begun in 1987.

The one-day conference will be held at Parliament on Thursday, 10 December, bringing together political party leaders – including the Prime Minister and the Leader of the Opposition – joined by journalists, independent commentators and academics, examining 'what happened and why', looking at the 2026 campaign and its consequences for New Zealanders.

Attendance is by registration, numbers are limited, with refreshments provided in The Grand Hall, Parliament Buildings. Registration fee: $45 students; $79 others.
